There isn't anyone who can cook as well as my friend Catarina. It's great that she's having a party this weekend because I haven't eaten a good meal in a long time (that is to say, since the last time I ate at her house). I hope that she makes her famous apple tart again, but I doubt that she will make it this weekend, because she served it less than a year ago and she rarely repeats herself. Even if she prepares this treat, it won't be the same because she always changes (improves) every recipe a little each time she uses it. I fear that I will never taste the same tart again. Maybe I'll beg her, so that she will prepare the tart for me for my birthday. I know that when I taste that tart again I will either be in heaven or in Catarina's dining room.
