

Present subjunctive

I doubt that John knows that we're planning a party for him. It doesn't seem possible that he is the new president of this company, and I don't imagine that he believes it either. I doubt that he likes this new position. I'm not convinced that he is ready for so great a responsibility; on the other hand, I don't suppose that anyone can become a great leader overnight. I want everything to go well for him.

to be ready	estar listo	not either	tampoco to become	hacerse	on the other hand	en cambio company	empresa	overnight	de la noche a la mañana
to go well	salir bien	to plan	planear leader	el líder	so; such	tan
