Pan Am enrolls seven new students this spring

by Jimena Hernandez
Managing Editor

January brings a New Year, new semester, and now new students at Presbyterian Pan American School (PPAS). PPAS received seven new underclassmen from diverse parts of the world. There are five Chinese, one Korean from Honolulu, Hawaii, and one from Roma, Texas.

“The reason they arrived this semester is because they couldn’t arrange their visa issues done on time, but it is a pleasure to receive them. The more variety and culture we have, the more the school gets enriched by it. We all can learn from them and vice versa,” said Joe Garcia, PPAS’ Director of Admissions.

Zhiyong Che, Hong Chen, Xiu Lin, Huiting Liu, Chen, and Ya Ting Wei, are the five Chinese students. Some of them came from an agency in New York that helps them find schools according to their needs and aptitudes. Some of them have family in the states, but the primary reason they came to the United States is because of the low tuition payments and the language. They want to learn English and go to college here, Garcia said.

“I came to this school to experience a new environment, and mainly because of my parents. They think it was a good opportunity for me to come,” said Roberto Abdal, a 17-year-old junior, from Roma.

Abdal’s first impression of the school was that he was on a ranch because of the surroundings.

The hardest to get used to for Abdal is not being able to leave during the weekend and what he enjoys the most is that there are no parents at the school.

Catastrophic earthquake struck Port-au-Prince, Haiti on Tuesday, January 12, 2010. The earthquake was 7.0 according to the magnitude earthquake scale. Experts considered the next 72 hours after the earthquake as the most critical. A series of aftershocks were recorded, fourteen of them between magnitudes 5.0 and 5.9. The studies estimated that about three million people were affected by the quake, and a death range from 100,000 to 150,000. According to the American Red Cross (ARC) about 45,000–50,000 people were killed. Close to where the earthquake was centered nearly every building collapsed, where thousands of people were killed or severely injured. This terrible disaster left all hospitals destroyed or badly damaged. This represents a severe problem because many people need immediate surgery, otherwise they will not

Putting Away Christmas

When it is time to put up the Christmas tree, it is with great excitement that I get out my ornaments and relive the memories each one brings to mind. Some were made by my children or grandchildren, some are from special places, and others have significance for different reasons. When the season is over and it is time to carefully wrap and store the ornaments, I usually savor the moments of the Christmas that was just celebrated. I wonder what the next year holds in store. A few years ago, I decided not to put away the ornaments with the pictures of my grandchildren. I keep them displayed in my kitchen so that I can enjoy them and our Christmas moments throughout the year. They are a reminder that Christmas is more than a day to celebrate. The true meaning of Christmas is that God sent His son to show us how to live, to teach us how to love and to serve others.

As a mission school, Pan Am receives funds delegated from the Presbyterian national missions as well as individual giving. The students are well aware of the benefits of mission and are learning how to give as well as receive. When the earthquake devastated Haiti, the students immediately initiated a drive to raise funds. Their goal was $500.00. By the end of the first week, they had collected more than half their goal from students and staff. The students' efforts were a reminder to me that they have not put Christmas away. The needs of Haiti will continue for many months, probably years. I know the students will continue to be sensitive to the mission needs of not only Haiti, but other parts of the world. In doing so, they keep the meaning of Christmas alive throughout the year.

PPAS adds leadership class

by Daniel Victoria
Staff Writer

It's a new year, new semester with new classes. After a three-week-long winter break, students came back to start the spring semester at Presbyterian Pan American School (PPAS).

Schedules were changed and some students were enrolled in new classes, others stayed the same and seniors began a new course as part of the Senior Seminar program.

"Leadership VI is a class which main goal is to focus on Christian leadership," said Dr. Barbara Stottlemeyer, Dean of Students.

For the fall semester, seniors read "Sophie's World," which was discussed among students, History Teacher Dan Meek, Christian Educator David Dzul and School President Dr. James Matthews, who taught the class every Wednesday. One of the biggest expectations of the class was for students to be able to identify with a determined leadership style. "Students will be reading 'The Purpose Driven Life,' by Rick Warren, the pastor of Saddleback Church in California," Stottlemeyer said, who will be teaching the class every Friday. "I think the new class is pretty interesting. One of the things I like the most about this class is the book we are reading. Last semester was sometimes hard to understand the other book because it was full of philosophy," said Areli Borunda, 17-year-old senior. Seventeen-year-old senior Karla Reyes said that she was very excited about taking the class and reading the book. "I think that 'The Purpose of Driven Life' is a very good book that shows people how to get closer to God. For me, it's like a journal that helps you to have a better relationship with Him and also understand that everything has been planned from the beginning in our lives," Reyes said. Seniors will also study other resources to understand what good leadership is all about, Stottlemeyer said. "I just want the students to interpret Christian life in their own way. We want them to always keep in mind what the school's mission is: to develop young Christian leaders for the world," Stottlemeyer said.

Safety schools

Colleges and universities with flexible admissions standards are often treated as "safety" schools. This term refers to schools whose requirements mean little chance of rejection for that applicant. Most students apply to just one safety school, but a student may opt for an academic safety and a financial safety.

Match schools

A "match" school is one that the student feels will fulfill his needs and desires and one he could happily attend, even though it may not be his first choice. The student should fit the general admissions criteria in academic and social arenas. A good rule of thumb is to have two to four match schools under consideration.

Reach schools

These are the student's top choices, but ones that are less likely to accept them. This may be because the student's qualifications match or fall slightly short of the school's average, and the competition for the limited places in the freshman class is intense. Students should have one or two schools in this category.

Teacher spotlight announced for January

■ by Alejandra Del Real

Staff Writer

Reili Cantu, from Estonia, Tallin, is the teacher spotlight for January at Presbyterian Pan American School (PPAS).

"I am super excited, it is a big honor," Cantu said. "I didn't expect it." Cantu attended Saint Lawrence University and currently lives in Kingsville. She received a bachelor's degree in psychology and her major is sports and leisure.

Before Cantu started teaching at PPAS, she worked in Orange Grove and at Texas A&M University-Kingsville.

Cantu instructs career orientation class and is the girl's basketball, track & field, cross country, and volleyball coach. Her favorite sport is track & field and she has been working here for two years.

She enjoys working at PPAS because it's a very unique community and it's like a big family, where people love each other, fight, but they really care about each other and I love it, Cantu said.

Cantu enjoys painting and gardening in her free time, she said.

Her goals and dreams are to be the best person possibly and help others along the way.

What she wants for the students is to reach their potential.

"If you strive, you can open your own doors and find ways to succeed," Cantu said.

Right now she is expecting a baby, due around July 4 and she is going to find out the sex of the baby in February. Cantu and her husband are extremely excited, she said.

She describes herself as friendly, energetic and she loves to laugh, likes to have fun, but not when it's time to work, she loves kids and loves to volunteer.

Senior class president chosen as student of the month

Senior Class President Veronica Vasquez, 18-year-old senior, at Presbyterian Pan American School (PPAS) was named student of the month for January. "When I knew about this, the first thing I thought about was the picture they were going to need, but on the other hand, it was a big surprise and I felt really good," she said. Vasquez was a member of the robotics team, and right now she is the senior class president and member of the National Honor Society (NHS). Vasquez lived in Cochabamba, Bolivia the first seven years of her life, but now she lives in Monterrey, Mexico. "I decided to come to PPAS because I found out about this school in the summer a couple of years ago and I thought it was a great opportunity," Vasquez said. She likes that this school is different from other schools and it's united like a big family, but what she likes the most is that it is a Christian school.

"I really thank God for all His help," she said.

Vasquez also said she loves Pre-Calculus classes with Hardy Robertson because she likes math.

Vasquez hopes to study film or something related to design after she graduates this May. "For this year, I would like to get good grades, graduate and clear out my future and also to tell the underclassmen that it is never too late to try to do better in school and in their lives."

DANIEL VICTORIA

Interview with 2009-2010 Eaglets 2 Class President

■ by Carlos Gutierrez

Staff Writer

Q: How do you feel being the Eaglets II class president?

A: I think I should feel proud about it, but I know that I have a great responsibility.

Q: Why do you think you got elected?

A: It's weird because at the beginning of the year I really didn't know most of my classmates but they elected me, I don't know why.

Daniel Victoria

Q: What are you in charge of? What are you working on?

A: Right now, we are focusing on saving money. We give one dollar every meeting and we have been thinking about fund raising too. We are also in charge of the senior banquet for this semester.

Q: What else are you involved in on campus?

A: I was part of the cross country team, choir and I'm thinking about joining the track team and obviously, I'm the president of the class.

Q: Why did you decide to run for class president?

A: I didn't decide it. They nominated me and I got elected.

Q: Do you like being president?

A: Yes, but to be honest I think that it is a very tiring job sometimes, but one of the great things about the class is that they are always willing to help.

Make everyday Valentine's Day

■ by Tania Rodriguez

["~"...have

talking and laughter.
Or have your sweetheart

friends."~]

St. Valentine's Day is a tradition that has been celebrated since the early 1700s. Lovers celebrate this festival in a traditional manner going out for a date in a park; or spending time looking into the eyes of their partners over a candlelight dinner. Giving fresh flowers, mainly red roses, chocolates, cards and other gifts of love is the other most popular custom of Valentine's Day for lovers.

While for lovers February 14th is their favorite date, singles even become depressed about not having a partner several days before the holiday when they see stores decorated with candies, chocolates and flowers.

No matter what type of person you are. The ugly truth is that February 14th rather than being a day to spend with your beloved or friends, is just business.

Ah yes, the sweet smell of commercialism in the air. Some people place so much expectation on this day; but why wait for one day out of the year to celebrate your relationship? Why? Because a heart shaped diamond pendant given on this one day out of the year says I love you more than a year's worth of joy, laughter, listening, sharing, surprises, tears, friendship, and love? I don't think so.

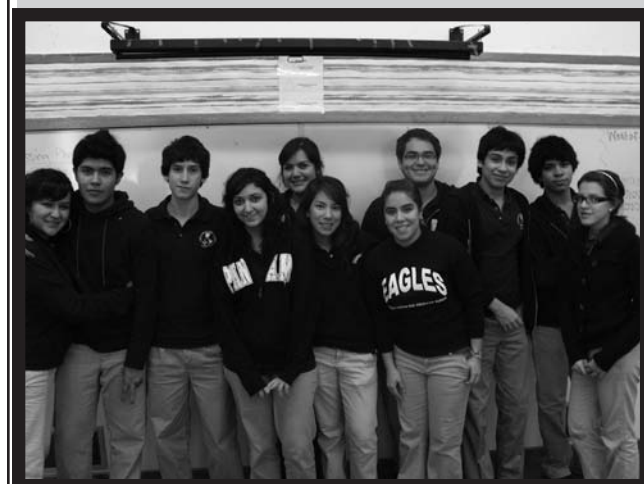

Love isn't demonstrated with goods or material things. Who would not prefer to be surprised any day throughout the year, with little things, like a book or a CD?

A detail is always worth more than a thousand words or any valuable gift. Who wouldn't like to find a little "I love you" note in their pocket once in a while?

It is sad that for some people the measure of love and romanticism fell on pouring it all into just one day out of the year.

If you are the kind of person who is trapped by publicity and business, don't let St. Valentine's Day fool you. Instead, have regular date afternoons, full of talking and laughter. Or have fun doing stuff with your sweetheart and friends.

Enjoy and surprise each other any day and any time of the year. Remember that love has a natural flow that cannot be altered by a collection of material goods.

Students witness TAMUK's win over Eastern New Mexico

■ by Viviana Garcia
Staff Writer

Presbyterian Pan American School (PPAS) students attended Texas A&M University-Kingsville's (TAMUK) men and women's basketball game against the Eastern New Mexico Greyhounds on January 16 at TAMUK.

The first weekend at PPAS back from a break means activities. The game started at 12:30 p.m. with the women's basketball team over the Eastern New Mexico Greyhounds with a victory on our side of, 77-61.

"I think the women's team played a really good game and I enjoyed every second I watched," said Paul Vilchez, 17-year-old junior.

The next game was the men's basketball team against the Eastern New Mexico Greyhounds with a victory on their side of, 72-62.

"I think the women's team did a better job than the men's team," said Keyla Cadena, 17-year-old junior.

Some of the reasons why I took the students to this basketball game were for entertainment, said Don Turner, Director of Activities. "Because of most of our student body is international and it exposes them to American culture," he said. "and finally because it exposed them to some elements of college and campus life."

survive. In addition, Haiti is the poorest country in the Western Hemisphere and home for about 380,000 orphans. People in Haiti need to sleep in the streets, on sidewalks, or in their cars, because their houses are destroyed.

Even though the priority is to care for survivors, it is urgent to bury the dead bodies that lay on the streets exposed to the sun. The main reason for rapidly burying bodies is to avoid diseases. The United States is deploying mortuary teams to identify and bury the dead in a public safety rescue mission, Kathleen Sebelius, secretary of Health and Human Services, said Thursday "We have a significant loss of life; we have people that are unknown; we have a significant number of missing people."

On January 20, Haiti suffered another aftershock with a magnitude of 6.7.

Presbyterian Pan American School (PPAS) staff and students did their part collecting money to send to Haiti.

Donald Turner, Student Council sponsor, came up with the idea.

I feel it is important for Americans to help the people in Haiti in their struggles for surviving. Even during the current economic recession our struggles seem minimal compared to Haiti's, he said.

"I hope our donations make a difference. I'm glad we are able to help and give back a little bit of what life has given us," said Senior Veronica Vasquez.

500 dollars were sent by PPAS to aid Haiti.

"The collection was successful and I'm very glad that everybody helped. The money has been sent already and I know it will be used in a wise way," said Ismael Sandoval, Student Council President.

PPAS boys beat Academy JV

Presbyterian Pan American School (PPAS) boys' first basketball team has seven won games and two losses this season, with one of the seven victories over Academy High School JV on Tuesday, January 19, 54-38.

"I'm proud of them, of all their hard work and all they have improved," said Coach Dan Meek. Now they play as a team and work together, Meek said.

Top scorer of the game was Junior Christian Ortiz with over 20 points. On January 12, PPAS played against New Covenant winning with a score of 58-49. This was their fifth win. Their sixth win game was on January 15 against Christian Life Academy which is considered a forfeit and counted as a win for us.

"We played good," said Hector Villegas, 17-year-old junior, "and now with Christian [Ortiz] on the team, we have more opportunities and plays."

The members of the first team are Captain Javier Villegas, senior; Hector Villegas, junior; Rafael Murgia, junior; Ismael Sandoval, senior; Joakin Perez, senior, Alfonso Ramos, Eaglet 2; Arnaldo Rodriguez, junior; Terry Liang, senior; Christian Ortiz, junior; and Javier Castrejon, senior. "We played very good like a team," said Javier Villegas, "We won as a team."

This season we have improved with new plays and we still have one game left to win, said Villegas. "I enjoyed my last season," Villegas added. The next game is scheduled for away on Saturday, Jan. 30 against Academy JV.

Track & field prepares for first meet Feb. 20

Classes began again and Coach Cantu can't wait to get the training started. For the second year in a row, the Estonian native will coach Track & Field during the spring semester.

"I'm excited. I think that this year we should do very well," Cantu said, who also coaches cross country, volleyball and girls basketball.

Cantu also said that one of her biggest goals in this year is to prepare people better so more athletes can go and compete in Regionals and District. "I want the girls to defend the district title they got last year. The Regional champions from Waco Reicher are in district now too and it will be hard but I know we can do it".

The first practice took place on January 19th at the outdoor basketball court at 4:30. For the first four days, students were divided into groups and exercised depending on their capacity.

There are about 12 planned track meets for this semester but some of them are still tentative. The first meeting will be on Saturday, February 20 in Orange Grove. Coach Daniel Meek will also help the Track and Field team.

"I'm still not sure if I'll have to leave the team because of my pregnancy but I know that Coach Meek will do a fantastic job," Cantu said. Seventeen-year-old junior Keyla Cadena said that one of her most important goals for this year is to improve her time in the races. "I think the first days are the worst because your body hurts a lot but with time it gets used to all the exercise we do," Cadena said. I just want the students to come and have fun, Cantu concluded.

Students have fun at welcome back dance

■ by Samuel Chavez
Staff Writer

December break is over and a new semester has begun. Presbyterian Pan American School (PPAS) students kicked off the 2010 semester with a welcome back dance on January 15 at 7 p.m. at the SUB on campus.

"I had a lot of fun, but I think it would have been better if more people had attended because there could have been more people to dance with," said Paul Vilchez, 17-year-old junior.

The dance was organized by the seniors class, who were in charge of the concession stand in which chocolates, sodas, pizzas, and other kinds of snacks were sold.

They were also in charge of the music at the dance and students were able to dance to all kinds of music such as reggaeton and electronic music.

"I was little disappointed because students were not cooperative and a couple of students that were there were outside and because of the weather, that caused students to arrive after time," said Don Turner, Director of Activities.

Senior Andres Hernandez said there have been better dances.

"Although it was almost terrible, the student body behaved the best possible way. We can improve it. We just need to increase the dancing time, and schedule different types of music. We can accept suggestions in the music selection," said Andres Hernandez, senior.

The dance ended at 10 p.m. because of the number of missing students.

classroom building with the presence of all the PPAS staff and students. The assembly opened with a prayer by David Dzul, Christian Educator, followed by Sarai Jimenez, 18-year-old senior, who read a short biography and some accomplishments of King. Saddam Bello, 18 year-old-senior, recited a fragment of his famous, "I Have a Dream" speech.

"I volunteered myself to speak because I am a great admirer of King's life. He was a wonderful man that left a footprint in people's lives and worldwide. He contributed to make the world a better place and was against violence," Jimenez said.

After the recitals, a video was shown together with his speech in remembrance of his good deeds and great influence.

"I found essential to remember the great heroes in the history if the human being that lead us encouragement and inspired not only the United States, but the entire world. It is important to let people know the sacrifices it took to eradicate slavery, that nowadays we still have roughly cases," Bello said.

King was born in Atlanta, Georgia. He earned degrees at Morehouse College (BA in 1948), Crozer Theological Seminary (BD in 1951), and Boston University (PhD in 1955). He was a powerful leader of the black civil rights movement during the 1950s and 1960s. He led a boycott that consisted in unifying the city's buses. In 1964, he was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize, according to Book 40 Model Essays, A Portable Anthology by Jane E. Aaron. He fought the abolition of slavery and the equal opportunity of rights for every human being. He was jailed, beaten, stoned, and stabbed. His house was bombed. On April 1968, at a motel in Memphis, Tennessee, he was assassinated.

"What I like the most about this school is that people are nice to me. To my surprise, almost everybody speaks Spanish and it's hard to understand, but I'm interested in learning the language," said Rodney Yun, a 17-year-old Junior, from Honolulu, Hawaii.

Yun's challenge was not leaving his parents, actually he found it easy. The real trial was to live in a dorm and to share a restroom.

"I like that everything is near you and you don't have to walk a lot, even though you also have a lot of rules," he said.
